The lodge itself is built from wood, palm and volcanic stone and the 7 suites are furnished with king beds, beautiful bed linen and intricate indigenous antiques. The Mayan highlands are rich in Mayan trails and ceremonial rocks and it is not uncommon to find a piece of ancient flint on the paths that surround the Lodge. Each of the thatched pavilions enjoy panoramic and far reaching views across the lake which can be explored in kayaks or canoes. The Zotz restaurant sits right next to the lake and has a seasonal eco-menu full of flavour. Local, natural and organic ingredients are a priority here and the vegetables, salads & herbs come direct from the garden.
